Welcome to the InsiderNJ 2017 MEDIA POWER LIST

MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR

THIS IS SO MUCH DAMN FUN.

We've put together too many lists, we figured it was an appropriate occasion to assemble a documentation of those humble New Jersey purveyors of thought; those practitioners of a refined political vocabulary, whom we define here against that lower primate order of upper echelon national leadership otherwise known as the presidency.

In the middle of an ongoing campaign to discredit reporters, and minimize the written and spoken word, we bear witness daily to one of the truly boorish exercises in modern American politics. It's hard to invoke a literate, public interest segment of society without hearing anew the howls of "fake news" from that podium that we, the people, own. While a reality show-fed ego at the top dovetails with that illiterate wing of the country that still doesn't know it lost the Civil War, we absorb this combination of forces with a sense of the surreal. The country seems to have made a hard evolutionary detour to a Plan 9 from Outer Space science fiction film script featuring a bewigged Pugsly in the lead role.

I remember my high school English teacher Joe Fili, standing up at the front of the room with a copy of his beloved King Lear by Shakespeare and telling us, "Getting old is one of life's heartbreaks, yes, but don't you dare get old and foolish." So here we are, America: old before our time and unwise, unwilling to grasp even the rudimentary concepts of our own history, and apparently mostly too egocentric to care; and intent on confusing the media with those hired help personages who should only report those surface qualities that are the preoccupation of spoiled children. With little to celebrate in such a dispiriting atmosphere, I take some measure of pride and heart in that enterprise otherwise known as the New Jersey Media, which represents at our statewide level such a vital force in these times.

Remember, this is the state that once prepared a young beat reporter from the Elizabeth Daily Journal named Carl Bernstein, who would go on to some place called The Washington Post.

This current crop of 100 that follows has taken a considerable beating over the last ten years. A lot of the best reporters in a badly depleted biz have either died or washed out, but several handfuls have survived cancer, heartache and that ever-intrusive hobgoblin called illiteracy, and stuck around, and more have joined the ranks. Forgive us for not including everyone. Inevitably with a list like this, we realize too late we missed someone. Understand that we didn't intend any offense. Please let us know who we left out, but also appreciate those who are here.

They're real pros. And indomitable.

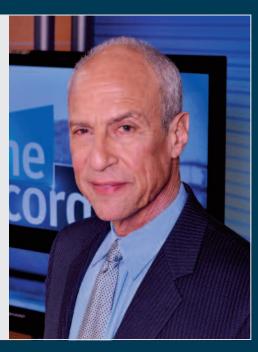

They are the life blood of our civic responsibility to daily make ourselves smarter and informed, and possessed of a patriotic command of the facts to better lay claim to our government and our ongoing and great Democratic experiment.

Better yet, they're New Jersey...

-Max Pizarro

The undisputed dean of New Jersey political reporting and NJTV chief political correspondent, and maybe New Jersey's lone gem, mensch Aron has the biggest treasure trove of institutional knowledge in the state. He has been everywhere and done everything in this business, including writing and publishing books, getting yelled at by then-President Bill Clinton, reporting live from outside the home of an on-the-lam Nick Bissell, breaking political news live nightly and hosting his weekly television shows: On the Record and Reporters Roundtable. He so obviously loves it, the depth of his passion for the work nutshelled in one recurring Aron quote: "If you're a reporter, New Jersey never lets you down."

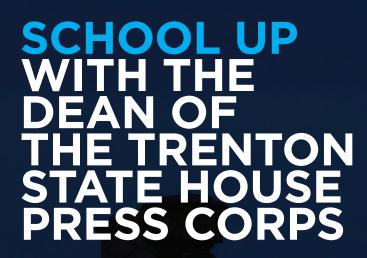

CHARLIE STILE, BERGEN RECORD

There may be other political columnists with wider reach, but none has the depth of the Bergen Record's Stile. He's the fine wine of political column writing, arguably the most determined purveyor of a higher level of discourse: both political and literary. But then, wasn't it George Orwell who said all political problems are grammatical? So many others have flamed out of the contest while the charming Stile continues to tear around the track. The sentences are so well constructed, and the ideas so germane and pragmatically packaged, his scorn for unabashed partisanship borne out by a style of critique that could only be described as realpolitik. Stile actually accomplishes the Herculean task of elevating something that may otherwise – but for Aron – very well be un-elevatable: New Jersey politics itself.

MATT FRIEDMAN, POLITICO NJ

The peerless Friedman really doesn't write about something unless it's politically important. In a way, the ten-year veteran's shaping into the most easily recognizable natural heir to MSNBC star Steve Kornacki. Superior political intellect, no-nonsense, just-the-facts prose style, television or radio-ready insightfulness, and a considerable resume, including tours of duty with the website previously known as PolitickerNJ, the Star-Ledger and now as the political anchor leg to Politico NJ. Author of the must-read Playbook. And he's still just a pup in his 30s.

With decades of stories, no one knows Trenton better than NJTV's Chief Political Correspondent Michael Aron. Join him for discussion with newsmakers and breakers and get a lesson in NJ politics.

INSIDER NJ

INSIDER 100 MEDIA POWER LIST

JOHN MOONEY, NJ SPOTLIGHT

The textbook case of an intractable intellect refusing to get chewed up in hackland, the former Star-Ledger scribe co-founded NJ Spotlight, hammering the nonprofit website into easily the most (maybe lone?) substantive destination. The key to Mooney's success? He doggedly writes about policy, and shuns the dumb subjects that form the backbone of most political media.

You can talk to people around the Statehouse and if there's a single respected resource on state budgetary matters, anyone in the know will immediately identify that person as Reitmeyer, the former Bergen Record brain turned online animal. The Clark Kentish Reimeyer also possesses something else you don't generally find in most pure-blooded nerds. Under a mild-mannered and gentlemanly demeanor, he disguises the very sharp elbows of an unapologetic hockey jock.

*******

RYAN HUTCHINS, POLITICO NJ

The lead dog supervising reporter at Politico NJ cut his teeth at the Star Ledger before signing on with Politico NJ, where he and Friedman provide a strong one-two punch. An elegant written word reporter, Hutchins also excels as a fierce and uncompromising inquisitor in political gaggles. If you're a politician with a sweaty hand in the cookie jar, you don't want to see Hutchins trooping up the hall with a recording device.

MIKE KELLY, BERGEN RECORD

Distinguished author and prose stylist Kelly really is as close as the state has left to the pure beat reporter, the kind of guy who sports a fedora and sits at the end of a long, poorly lit bar scratching notes on a notepad. This is the real deal. This is the guy with a conscience and an intellect, a sleuthing and crusading dedication and a generally fearless Irish, Conor McGregor-like disposition under the civilized-looking package. His dispatches are for North Jersey what his colleague Stile is to the Statehouse.

We don't just talk strategy, we deliver results. Let us chart your success in New Jersey.

KAUFMAN ZITA GROUP

Government Affairs & Lobbying | Community Relations
Business Development & Procurement | Healthcare Consulting

STEVE ADUBATO, JR., NJTV

Now with an Emmy nomination, the master communicator, and author of Leadership will undoubtedly have even more media heft. Watch one of Adubato's shows. To listen to him speak the language is almost akin to enjoying a Miles Davis record when what you seek is a smooth instrument that doesn't trip itself up on the squeaks, bumpy passages or false notes that routinely bedevil lesser horn players.

TOM MORAN, STAR-LEDGER

A veteran presence, the Essex County-based Moran writes political columns and editorials for the state's paper of record. He has a following among progressives who appreciate his willingness to jump onto the front-lines of political debates, and at least weekly writes a column that generally everyone in the state who cares about politics must read.

******

DAVID CRUZ, NJTV MICHAEL HILL, NJTV

The horror is having to tweedle-dum-and-dee them in one entry, but they are dogged equals. The NJTV political news correspondents have muscled their way into contention as two of the most sporting reporters in politics. In a word: aggressive. If you're a politician, don't let them catch you napping or sticking your foot in your mouth. They'll be on top of you like a pair of hungry hounds – with rolling cameras in tow.

RICK GREEN, BERGEN RECORD

Editor of the Bergen Record. Sure, the place has changed, we all know that. It's no longer the little ma and pa delicatessen of words you knew when you were growing up in the Bergen suburbs. But as long as that muscular veteran staff is there, it continues to be important.

A politician turned political journalist, workaholic Spadea has made himself an immovable radio force with his daily morning broadcast, reinforced by his evening TV alter ego as ring leader of MY9's Chasing. To his credit, Marine Corps vet (and, to this point, anyway, Trump-loving) Spadea chews voraciously into issues and champions causes, using his bully pulpit on the right much the way Moran uses his on the left.

TOM MARTELLO,
STAR-LEDGER

The veteran Star-Ledger editor anchors the Statehouse Bureau. A veteran with veteran's chops, like Moran he spans the void back to a more literate newspaper time.

SAL RIZZO,
OBSERVER LOCAL POLITICS EDITOR

He heads up political coverage for not just one but two states, helming Observer's New York and New Jersey bureaus. A former Star-Ledger and Bergen Record reporter, Rizzo is one of the best reporters in New Jersey, a truly substantive and intellectually honest broker.

JONATHAN DIEST, NBC 4

The stuffed and mounted head of Paterson Mayor Jose "Joey" Torres forms the basis of NBC reporter Diest's political contribution to New Jersey's political coverage, the result of his investigative news series about Silk City corruption.

DAVID GIAMBUSSO, POLITICO NJ

Having cut his teeth as a former Newark beat reporter for the Star-Ledger, the Politico NJ reporter is a smart and snarky veteran.

******

HARRY HURLEY, WPG

You like breaking news out of Atlantic City and South Jersey? Then you must be familiar with the well-connected, well-sourced, and popular Hurley, who breaks most (or at least many) of the dock-front political stories – and has a must-read column with Shore News Today.

MATT ARCO,
NJ ADVANCE MEDIA

A dedicated student of the game, Star-Ledger political reporter Arco got his start at PolitickerNJ before taking the Friedman career path to the Ledger. He specializes in covering Governor Chris Christie, and will presumably carry on as a Drumthwacket-centric beat reporter.

Congratulations to all included on The Insider 100: Media List

Solid. Reputable. Trusted. Battle-tested. The Star-Ledger's Johnson has hung around long enough to become one the paper of record's go-to political resources. He's meat and potatoes personified.

AUGIE TORRES,
JERSEY JOURNAL

Even from his book-lined, ivory tower of semi-retirement, the Jersey Journal's Political Insider and inveterate Hudson County pavement-pounding scalawag provides a unique perspective on politics. Funny, with a reportorial talent that was unprecedented and never duplicated, Torres is the Groucho Marx of Hudson.

*******

KEVIN RIORDAN,
PHILADELPHIA
INQUIRER

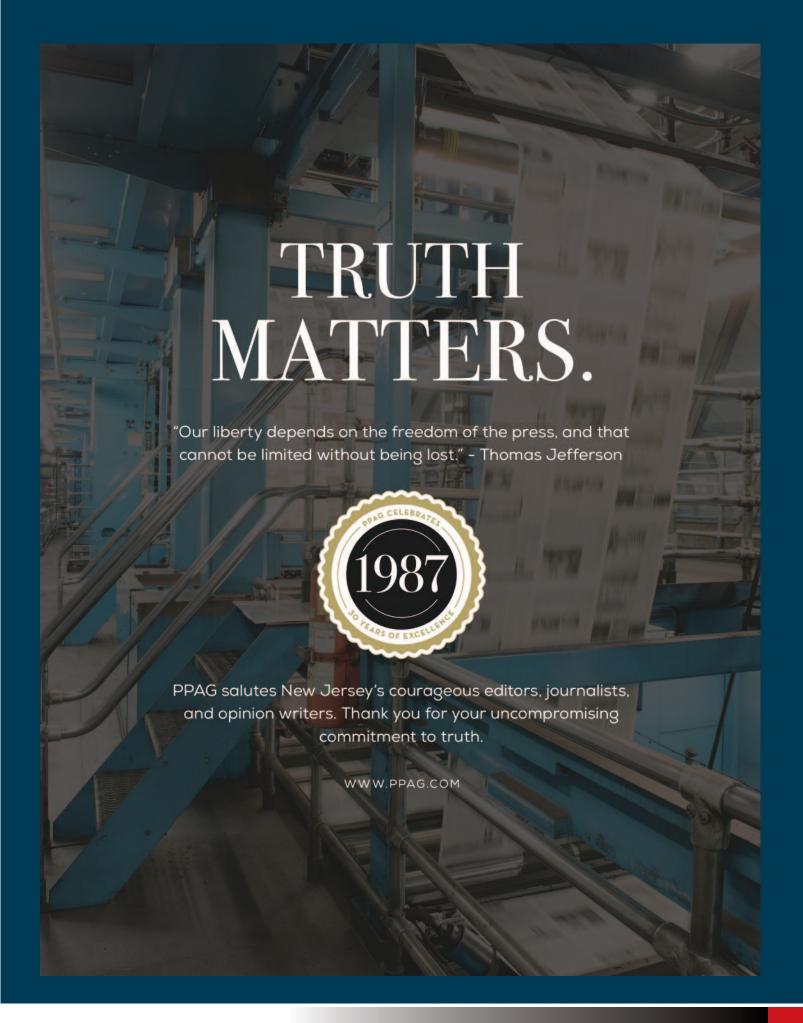

Riordan has been in the journalism game since the Byrne administration and has a wealth of institutional and historic knowledge, and is a must-read columnist for South Jersey – and beyond.

22

JIM MCQUEENY,
NJN

The former Frank Lautenberg staffer hosts the upbeat and snappy New Jersey Now. McQueeny got his start as a reporter in Hudson County, so he can throw you that off-the-cuff anecdote about Jersey City Mayor Tommie Smith, for example, that makes you want to go backrummaging through the archives.

INSIDER NJ

INSIDER 100 MEDIA POWER LIST

23
BRENDA FLANAGAN,
NJTV

The top notch pro covers Statehouse and street politics for NJTV. Tenacious? Flanagan's the kind of reporter who shows up in a driving, state-debilitating snowstorm to tackle a disguised politician on the tarmac of Newark Airport before he can get out of town on that flight to Miami.

24
CLAUDE BRODESSER

CLAUDE BRODESSER-AKNER, NJ ADVANCE MEDIA

It's hard enough being literate in New Jersey. To be both literate and literary accomplishes a rare feat that tests the limits of credulity where resembling a mobster means more than knowing how to read or speak. But the Star-Ledger reporter who covers Christie – a transplant from California – has managed to stay on his feet here – and do something almost unthinkable: educate.

******

25

ERIC SCOTT, NJ 101.5

The voice of 101.5 FM sounds like the radio equivalent of every leading man who ever made a movie in the 1940s and 1950s. He's the Robert Taylor of New Jersey media: strong, protective, solid, stolid and trustworthy.

26
BRIANNA VANNOZI,
NJTV

The veteran NJTV reporter is a New Jersey star. Look, you could make the case for putting her in the top ten, the top five. She may yet absolutely inherit the mantle of Aron, which would be better than Barry Bonds taking the career home runs record from Henry Aaron. She's a great (and fair) reporter.

Salant is NJ.com's go-to for DC political coverage: like Herb Jackson at the Record, Salant can take a national story and bring it back to home and give it a Jersey-focus.

28
MIKE SHAPIRO,
TAP INTO

As founding editor, the businessman/attorney spent ten years building the TAP into network of hyper-local news sites the into one of New Jersey's most trusted sources for local news.

*******

The editorial page editor for the Bergen Record could write a novel. In fact, he doesn't need to write a novel. He could attach all his columns together from the last ten years and he'd have the War and Peace of New Jersey politics.

30

MATT KATZ,
WNYC

The author of the definitive boom about Chris Christie, "American Governor", commands one of the most sought-after platforms for all things New Jersey politics. Don't ever underestimate him or be thrown by the boy next door routine. This is the guy who wraps a chummy arm around you at the bar. Next thing you know you hear that charming radio voice calming telling the world how you're finished.

GUARINI INSTITUTE

for Government and Leadership

Pr Saint Peter's University

31

DUSTIN RACIOPPI,
BERGEN RECORD

The Bergen Record reporter does the job with a touch of elegance. Impatient with pretenders and non-fact-based nebulae that fronts as New Jersey's intellectual capital, Racioppi is a genuine throw-back, the kind of guy who will one day take the reins of Mike Kelly's buckboard.

32

JULIE BRIGGS, WMTR

The class act hosts "Your New Jersey Connection" and "Ask the Expert" on WMTR.

******

NICHOLAS HUBA, PRESS OF
ATLANTIC CITY

The Press of Atlantic City reporter is a top-notch reporter covering South Jersey, and specifically Atlantic City and the casino scene.

34

PAUL MULSHINE,
STAR-LEDGER

The conservative Star-Ledger columnist brings to mind that line from Hemingway's Death in the Afternoon: "All right, you get the hell out of here" when someone complains that bullfighting is boring. Like bullfighting, Mulshine's columns gore – but never bore.

35

DAVID MATTHAU,
NJ 101.5

The 101.5 FM reporter has an inimitable style. Take a listen to that broadcast. There's something very distinctive about the way he signs off on every broadcast.

36

JONATHAN TAMARI,
PHILADELPHIA
INQUIRER

The Philadelphia Inquirer reporter is equally capable of producing deep dive content on federal or state issues. A details-oriented, precision-driven professional, Tamari is also one of the best writers of politics in the business.

******

37

PHIL GREGORY, WBGO

It's the typical combination. Mild-mannered – and lethal.

TERRENCE MACDONALD, JERSEY JOURNAL

In an era of shriveled-up local news coverage, the Jersey Journal reporter is that rare bird who actually aggressively seems to relish the City Hall beat. He's been invaluable as that front-line source in New Jersey's most populous city.

The founding editor of Politifax and host of NJTV's Pasta and Politics endures as one of the great characters in New Jersey politics. He's the media mensch from Hoboken whose ring must be kissed by any out-of-towner who sets forth to examine politics in Hudson.

JOHN HEINIS, HUDSON COUNTY

VIEW

If politics is a contact sport in New Jersey, or a blood sport, as Kim Guadagno once said, then the founding editor of Hudson County View comes well prepared. He's a competitive jujitsu fighter, and that expertise translates into his hard-hitting pieces.

BOB HENNELLY

The veteran reporter, a Paterson native, comes equipped with that pepper-immune nose for investigative news they can't teach in journalism school. One of the best, he now freelances for – among others – InsiderNJ, where we are thrilled to have him.

46

MATT ROONEY,
SAVE JERSEY

The founding editor of Save Jersey has carved out a space for himself as the state's go-to GOP commentator and opinion-crafter.

***********

Only editor Gallagher has persevered to shape his longstanding Republican blog, More Monmouth Musings, into must read material for anyone interested in the local dynamics of shoreline politics.

The Paterson Press editor/reporter is a force to be reckoned with in Paterson politics, one of the best local beat guys in the business.

49
ALAN STEINBERG

A veteran of the Bush Administration, the InsiderNJ columnist now offers center-right perspectives, and routinely appears on TV as a political prognosticator.

50
ANJALEE KHEMLANI,
NJ BIZ

Reporter Khemlani has the ability to hone in on the business-and-industry focus of the political landscape in New Jersey, and it's evident in her pieces.

The sartorially gifted television newsman hosts Power and Politics on News 12. Velvet voiced, he could sing harmony on an old Byrds record and not an ear would twitch.

52 STEVE KORNACKI, MSNBC

The intellectually brilliant MSNBC star started out in the Garden State as the original PoliticsNJ reporter. He doesn't focus on New Jersey all the time, but when something big happens here, he has the ability to reach into his considerable source network and invariably come up with something pertinent.

*******

The bilingual North Jersey-based politics reporter writes for Observer New Jersey politics. Diminutive but fearless, she routinely wades onto tough turf where more egocentric male counterparts can be found back pedaling in a cold sweat.

Having cut his teeth as a beat reporter for the Press of Atlantic City, the sharp Hetrick now works as the Statehouse reporter for Observer New Jersey Politics.

LUPEPAC is a non-partisan political action committee whose mission is to increase the number of Latinas in elected and appointed office in the State of New Jersey.

We promote and support progressive Latinas running for local, state and federal office.

97
BRIAN LEHRER,
WNYC

The host of WNYC's award-winning Brian Lehrer Show doesn't dive into New Jersey every day, but when he does he takes on the issues with authority.

98

MARK BONAMO,
TAP INTO NEWARK

The TAPinto Newark editor and reporter knows Brick City politics and has a deep source network in North Jersey.

DAVID CHEN, NEW YORK TIMES

No longer based at the Statehouse, Chen still parachutes into New Jersey politics from time to time.

The Princeton University grad is the editor and brains behind the Drudge-inspired Jersey Report.
