STATEMENT

This bill requires that the Economic Development Inspector General (inspector general), appointed pursuant to P.L. , c. (C.) (pending before the Legislature as Assembly Bill No. of 2019), employ an Economic Development Auditor (auditor).

Under the bill, the auditor is required to evaluate and review records of entities and individuals doing business with or receiving economic development incentives from the New Jersey Economic Development Authority (EDA). The auditor is required to evaluate on an ongoing basis each economic development incentive recipient's compliance with requirements applicable pursuant to an economic development incentive program and any agreement between the recipient and the authority.

The bill provides that the auditor is to:

(1) review all applications and supporting documentation submitted by applicants for economic development incentive programs to evaluate each applicant's eligibility under the respective program and to verify the validity of an applicant's claims;

(2) prepare, and make available to the public, written reports of the auditors findings with respect to an economic development incentive recipient's compliance with economic development incentive program and agreement requirements;

(3) inform the inspector general of information received and findings compiled by the auditor related to an economic development incentive recipient's compliance with economic development incentive program and agreement requirements; and

(4) make recommendations to inspector general related to appropriate actions that the Office of the Economic Development Inspector General may take in response to any finding by the auditor that an economic development incentive recipient utilized improper accounting methods or made misrepresentations related to the receipt of an economic development incentive.

For any program that stipulates that the award of an economic development incentive is contingent upon a claim by an applicant that the receipt of incentives is determinative in the applicant's decision to create or retain jobs in this State, the bill requires the auditor to prepare a separate written report assessing the validity of each applicant's claims and evaluating the potential outcomes for the State if the applicant were not to receive an economic development incentive under that program.

Under the bill, the auditor is to report annually to the Governor, to the Legislature, and to the inspector general, the activities of the auditor, as well any recommendations, if any, for the oversight and evaluation of the State's economic development incentive programs.

The bill will not take effect until the date of enactment of P.L. , c. (C.) (pending before the Legislature as Assembly Bill No. of 2019).
